THE three hangings in Kentucky were very artistically performed. Simpson Bush, who murdered his wife as a climax to a life of crime, and was hung at Stanton, hardly struggled after going through the hole; Wm. Puckett, who clubbed Wm. Hall to death at Irvine, was pronounced dead in five minutes after the drop fell and Robert Charleton, who murdered his mistress, was in eternity almost before the drink of whisky he asked for and got had settled in his stomach. The first two were white men and the third a negro. There was no doubt about their guilt so they contented themselves with assuring the vast crowds, which saw them die, that they were ticketed though to the New Jeru salem. It was a good day's work. Let it go bravely on.

MISS ALICE WARD, the Memphis girl who severed her friend's jugular with a razor and savagely slashed another girl, wants to hang for the crime. She thinks it would be very romantic to stand upon the gibbet and be the cynosure of all eyes. Her wish will hardly be gratified in this age of sentimentalism against inflicting the death penalty on women, but the nature of this girl's crime seems to make her especially worthy to adorn a gallows tree.

Attention of the public is invited to the fact that this is the only National Bank in Stanford, Under the provisions of the National Bank Act that this is the only National Bank in Stanford, Under the provisions of the National Bank Act depositors are secured not only by the capital stock, but by the stockholders' hability for an amount equal to the stock, so that depositors of this institution are secured by a fund of $400,000. Five sworn statements of the condition of the bank are made each year to the United States government and its assets are examined at stated times by government agents, thus securing additional and perfect safety to depositors.

This institution, originally established as the Deposit Bank of Stanford in 1858, then re-organized as the National Bank of Stanford in 1858 and again re-organized as the First National Bank of Stanford in 1852, has had practically an uninterrupted existence of 32 years. It is better supplied now with facilities for transacting business prompt ly and liberally than ever before in its long and honorable career. Accounts of corporations, fiducitaries, firms and individuals respectfully solicited.

The Directory of this Bank is composed of T. J. Foster, of Stanford;

THE new St. John's church. Louisville, erected in the place of the one destroyed by the cyclone, was dedicated Sunday by Bishop Dudley. The rector was killed by the cyclone and the corner stone is inscribed "To the glory of God and in loving remembrance of Stephen Elliott Barnwell."

-The admission of women as delegates to the General Conference of the M thodist Episcopal church has been defeated after all; that is the required three-fourths majority was not secured, although the vote stood among the membership, 735,148 for and only 183,694 against. The ministers voted 5,602 for and 5,151 against, the majority for being only 431 among the preachers.

Jim McCreary.

Savoyard writes as follows of our excellent representative: About the year 1867, a young man, not two years out of the Confederate army, in the cavalry arm of which he had been a colonel, was a candidate for a seat in the Kentucky Legislature from the county of Madison, his disabilities having been removed by an act of Congress. He was the democratic nominee, and Madison was a democratic county. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the day of the August election, returns were brought in to the democratic headquar ters, in the town of Richmond, showing that the democratic ticket bad swept the county, and if every vote polled from that hour was republican the democrat ic ticket would be victorious by an overwhelming vote. At that moment a man living three or four miles in the country him. was sick, but if he had a conveyance he could be brought to the polls and would vote. The committee unanimously resolved that it was useless; but the young candidate for the Legislature spoke up and said: "No, it is not useless. Go to the livery stable, get a borse and buggy and bring him to the polls. Have the bill charged to me." It was done, and James B. McCreary's majority was one greater. He was the young ex-Confederate and that was his first race. That is the sort of man he is. There is the key Foreign and Domestic Fruits, to his success, the key that made him assess the groom for the costs."
